Sexuality is a subject matter which has left so many wondering since the beginning of times, and it is not without a reason that seduction is often associated with a magic operating outside our realm, hence the captivating - and also obsessive - interest it will forever suscite. But why then do so many remain unsatisfied with their romantic or sex lives? The Metaphysics of Sex aims at lifting the veil by revealing the hidden Force behind it: Electromagnetism, which obeys very specific Natural Laws or Hermetic Principles. The latter are key to understand the mechanisms ruling over our emotions as Sex is most powerful Force in the entire Universe and this Force is also the underlying explanation of the Fear of Being. The Conscious Universe simply tells us that Matter and Thought come to life through a Cosmic Mind in a perpetual orgasmic state, hence ultimately to guide humans on the path to the achievement of Self-Love to manifest the Law of Correspondence. First and foremost this book isn't meant to ostracize certain sexual behaviors, nor is an erotic user manual but probes Sexuality as the absolute expression of the Oneness. Electromagnetism being composed by negative and positive charges, this is not only valid for heterosexuality but homosexuality as well since even same sex relationships exhibit these very male-female interactive components: it is thus up to the reader to interpret what is said in this book and adjust it to his own situation.

PROLOGUE

Sex is the fundamental principle of Creation. It is the dual desire force in Mind for expressing its One Idea. Without a division of the one unconditioned Light into two seemingly conditioned lights, Creation could not be. Sex is not a thing, it is a condition of a thing. An electrically balanced condition of anything is sexless whether it be a man, woman, electric battery, or the atmosphere. A sexed condition is an unbalanced condition. An electric battery which is fully charged is dually unbalanced by the opposite electric pressures of compression and expansion. These two opposite unbalanced conditions violently desire to return to the oneness of balance from which they were divided into two. A short circuit between the two poles of the battery will give it that balance. We then say it is dead, for it will no longer perform work by expressing its desire for balance The sex matings of the elements exactly coincide in effect with the sex matings of humans. Violent explosions in the elements have the same basic cause as such violent explosions as murder in humans. Terrific electric unbalance is the cause of both. Likewise, stability in the elements and in humans has the same cause in equality of balance -- Walter Russell

First and foremost this book isn't meant to ostracize certain sexual behaviors, nor is an erotic user manual but probes Sexuality as the absolute expression of the Oneness. As much as the Electric Universe Theory is currently challenging and poised to redesign mainstream astrophysics, The Metaphysics Of Sex aims at shedding light on the 'big picture' in a world subjected to a perpetual 'war on Consciousness' and its ensuing psychic fragmentation. Some countries are over-sexualized, others totally repressed, though it does not really matter as The Law of The Opposites teaches that both ends of a spectrum always translate into the same outcome: a self-depreciation and/or loss of critical thinking linked to unsustainable cultural levels of coercion dictating behaviors and defining norms. It is the popular belief that people in the West are free-er compared to the rest of the world, but this is a mere perception as argued in The Empathic Society addendum.

Although some external pressure and skepticism are keys to exercise Free Will, mankind's history is repleted with tales of civilizations determining which groups are in power, and this is exactly what this work will focus on: Power. Its definition and most importantly what is wrong with seeking to control romantic outcomes, because if this is not fully grasped, inner growth too will remain a vague dream to achieve, or worse condone emotional servitude. And if the Psyche is imprisoned, so is the Body. The Metaphysics of Sex doesn't preach in favor of attaining perfection but merely outlines the Oneness' inner workings to help make sense of any arising dilemmas on an existential scale. It can be summarized as set of guidelines aiming at extricating one self from misconceptions generated by the academic department of psychology, which clearly demonstrates its inefficiency on a regular basis. The Trap Of Psychoanalysis section surely begs to differ on the current Archetypes and how the latter are exploited to keep society within low-level type of vibrations perpetuating Bondage and Lust addiction.

Today the number of people consulting shrinks is absolutely staggering, and even though all couch-therapies lead to the sensitive examination of Sexuality, therapists have a little understanding - if none at all - of what is going on on a cosmic dimension and whose effects are directly observable as its Prime Cause is 'Electromagnetism', without which the Universe wouldn't hold together. Being also the Blood of the Universe, Electricity rules over every existing atom, including the very Field of the Mind as neurons electrically process emotions in a fashion that is therefore dual by nature. Why dual? Simply because there isn't any electric current without the anodes A and B. Positive and negative charges. Magnetism is the property that allows Electricity to circulate. Comprehending why all life paths end up highlighting sexual behaviors is thus essential here as Sexuality cannot express itself without the Male and Female components. We live in a Sexed Universe, emotions are sexed by definition as much as every situation has upsides and downsides. There is no progression without a resistance. And it is the Fear of the resistance that brings about relationship dilemmas to the point to often make them fall apart. The Holistic Brain section offers a much deeper insight about the thought mechanisms that everybody should be aware of.

For their sake, as well as growing in awareness, Humans need to regard the Prime Cause, Electromagnetism, as a Force and its own set of Natural Laws, which will ultimately always determine the outcome, in the sense that the polarization of thoughts creates recurrent and self-defeating mind patterns, which can be corrected with Hypnosis, Meditation or even Shamanism if the knowledge expounded here genuinely prompts the desire for a radical inner change. The increasing success of Shamanism today rather indicates that more and more people seek self-healing from a social and generational emotional disconnect with Nature, the Spirit Molecule.

Although the Collective may encourage individuals, it is the Individual that shapes the Collective. As much as a forest wouldn't exist without each tree, a Collective depends on the individual's abilities to process data rightfully. The Collective will always mirror the inner balance of the beings within it. Both form an Energy Vortex within which Individuals are the inflow and the Collective the outflow, which then returns to the Individuals. The Collective is a Mind Matrix regulated by each individual's psyche. So, in order to transform what is, an individual change of mindset must occur first. What needs to be transformed in this case is our attitudes toward Sexuality as a whole as it is clear that our Western society is about to reach a threshold instigated by The Economics of Sex, itself meant to not only distract from the 'big picture' but seriously undermines the male-female Complementary Principles. This is not only valid for heterosexuality but homosexuality as well since even same sex relationships exhibit these very male-female interactive components. It is thus up to the reader to interpret what is said in this book and adjust it to his own situation, this to explain why there isn't any section dedicated to homosexuality. As already stipulated above, The Metaphysics of Sex doesn't seek to redefine norms (as it recognizes the holographic nature of Reality) but argues for the merging of spirituality and sciences and provides templates demonstrating how the pursuit of fulfillment can unfold without causing any major crises, as long as partners or lovers are aware of the Prime Cause.

And this to enhance sensuality or begin a relationship based on a rock solid trust - or even being able to overcome conflicts a lot quicker and more importantly without counseling. Psychoanalysis has consistently dismissed, on purpose, to probe Sexuality (the union of two polarities) as the most powerful Force in the Universe that propagates not only Life but Love, and thus unable to sort out the dilemma of societies praising egos in quest for power and domination that brings about all sorts of emotional disconnects increasing the divide between Sexes. We all share the same 'individual karma' which is the Fear of Being. And how this Fear translates doesn't matter as the environment always mirrors the Self. Years of couch therapies focusing on parental behaviors and their aftermaths are pretty much ineffective in this sense. Parental behaviors are themselves mere generational consequences of the Fear of Being remaining unaddressed by educational dogmas as a whole.

Many assumed the 60s would radically change Western society, that female emancipation would make women not only better mothers but lovers. Several decades later, the feminist legacy is rather bleak. As to wonder whether emancipation ever took place. It is a word that lured them into believing that acting like men sexually would end a millennia-long gender conflict. Masculinity has too been misguided for centuries and bears the stigmas of a left-brained society that cannot last forever. While feminism debases male sexuality in the process, the sad state of affair is that the emancipation women took for granted, has rather a lot more to do with a 'systemic suppression' fostering the wrong Economics Of Sex.

Is it necessary to have experienced the full spectrum of Sexuality to understand what is being developed in The Metaphysics of Sex? Not really. Everybody has happened to deal with the downsides of what is called 'passion', trying to see one' self in the other's eyes or taking a lover/mate for granted. While we do need others for personal growth and exchange perceptions, we learn most from obstacles. One' sense of the self is unique and possesses all answers within. Flaws also are qualities, without them we cannot improve. It is when we fail to realize this that we become dependent on others' opinions and expectations, or fear the latter and won't dare speak out our minds.

This website is a place for women and men alike who wish to understand why all relationships, even though all seem to narrate different stories, are bound to face the same challenges over time. The knowledge shared in this book isn't available in the mainstream and often tagged as esoteric. But what does 'esoteric' mean? Simply knowledge that only a very few can comprehend. However, it was meant to be this way. This concealment is as old as Humanity. The Metaphysics of Sex attempts to convey the core issues with realism in order to unveil the Maze of Human Consciousness and its connection with The Unconditional Now. The Metaphysics of Sex also has very little to do with the Law of Attraction, if nothing at all, a concept that has been quite much oversold by new-agers, but the 'Law of Balance': why Desire is inseparable from its Opposite Motion, Asceticism, and forms with the latter a perfect harmony when non-duality principles are assimilated - or may reveal itself as a 'destructive vortex' when oblivious to their energy flows. It is not without a reason that the Western society has become over-sexualized.

In our Physical Reality, without the understanding of Electromagnetism and Dualism, Sexuality exposes itself as the 'paramount of all illusions' as it also rules over all our fears, and that Fear manifests the metaphysical absence of Love. (to be continued)

 Natural Laws And The Oneness
 The Law of Polarity Dictates The Law of Attraction

1: NEW AGE vs AETHER AGE & THE ECONOMICS OF SEX

This whole electric universe is a complex maze of similar tensions. Every particle of matter in the universe is separated from its condition of oneness, just as the return ball is separated from the hand, and each is connected with the other one by an electric thread of light which measures the tension of that separateness -- Walter Russell

While it is kind of tricky to foresee the evolution of the New Age movement at this stage, it really could go either ways. Either ways because, it is being turned into another dualistic social layer added to those already existing or could surpass itself by refusing any external coercion. More importantly we also keep in mind that when using this label, there isn't absolutely nothing 'new' with it as it finds its roots in Ancient Egypt; Chinese, Celtic and the Vedic symbolism; Hermeticism and Gnosticism, all of which are often referred to as 'esoteric and occult knowledge'. Rationally speaking, the terms occult and esoteric respectively mean 'hidden' and 'for the very few in the know', and thus describes as such since the rise of monotheism, this in order to deter people from learning about it. However, vilification itself is a tactic as old as Mankind, and used when the hierarchy wants to impose new codes of conduct.

The definition of being a 'new ager' is kind of flexible but the vast majority agrees with the concept of the Oneness. The main issue with the New Age movement is that it spreads concepts inspired by the Law of Attractions that are often incorrect and preaches to reject any negative thoughts invading subjective reality, hence objective reality isn't dealt with but rather associated with troubles and bad karma, in short instills Fear. And Fear is the glue without which no doctrine can hold together: one just has to meditate to attract happiness and become successful. It gives an illusion of free choice. And this represents the major pitfall of the hyped mainstream New Age movement if any, and which is reminiscent of the Hippie era, drugs being replaced with 'positive thinking'.

Mainstream New Age also advocates for a collective ascension and/or extraterrestrial intervention that will save mankind and which takes away Free Will as the mindset endorses an authority or phenomenon. And this also holds true for any belief system promoting the idea of salvation by or for a group. Such a belief is 'right brained' oriented as it exploits a mystical naivete which cannot resolve any human crises but the comprehension of Reality itself, and this process starts with the formulation of real questions within to call upon critical information. A spirituality exclusively operating within the Right Brain can only perpetuate and strengthen the paradoxes arising from its interaction with the Left Brain.

Evolving in parallel of Mainstream New Age, there is an Underground trend called by Sevan Bomar among others, 'The Age of Aether', and which deserves attention as it propagates Freedom from Fear through inner understanding, one of the main tenets of Theosophy but differs from the latter in the sense that it probes and unroots the origins of 'good and evil' which Theosophists have subverted to benefit social hierarchy. There is so much to learn from Fear. How the 'fear factor' is approached may well be the sole and only fashion to determine the worthiness of any spiritual, political or philosophical train of thoughts, because it is the indoctrination of Fear which imprisons man's mind and to free the latter, the sum of all our fears will have to be internally processed and released, one individual at the time, even if this means taking a loss in the materialistic sense to ultimately restore the much needed equilibrium within every human being. The challenge we are faced with is that this release cannot be coerced in any way but must become obvious to the Self becoming aware of Consciousness as a 'Cosmic Mind' ruled by two motions or polarities: Love (empathy, compassion, selflessness etc) and Fear (hatred, selfishness, domination, etc). The Metaphysics of Sex aims to go along those lines to explain why engaging in sexual behaviors involves knowing about the ethics directly emanating from the Cosmic Mind, or Mentalism as a self existing Principle. Although Infinite Awareness is the spiritual paramount encompassing all dimensions of 'The Whole That Is', dogmas have been unwilling to address the motion of Self-Love, which is the foundation of all peaceful behaviors, but keep alive compartmentalizations competing with one another while asserting that they all are the only and sole true path to enlightenment. Without a doubt, their most striking similarity is the teaching of individual emotional self-suppression either in favor of others sharing the same belief system, or the mind in which case emotions are regarded as inimical to spiritual development. Such multiple layers of dualistic pressure imposed on societies is tremendous as a result and surely cannot bring about any religious tolerance as long as power remains at the very heart of their stances. More is said about this in the full version of this book.

Although most have something or someone to blame for when a breakup is initiated, it is more insightful to look into the causes of imbalances. And often it will be found out that the interaction was very much uneven. What isn't necessarily either good or bad in itself though. There is nothing wrong with being measured but if this caution comes from of the 'fear of giving', it will rather morph one into a taker. Many on the brink of a break up deal with an impression of emotional abuse but will completely avoid to question their own 'fear of giving'. Emotional self-control is only positive when declining to receive accordingly in order to keep the interaction balanced. Since the Fear of Being is a deep generational stigma close to reaching a threshold, people have become extremely polarized in their ways to interact, hence have tendency to either give or take irrationally. That is where the Law Of Attraction may reveal itself deceiving because polarities respond the Law Of Balance - or Correspondence - and work in a way to void one another by confrontation in order to fuse and become One. One always attracts what has to be overcome. The more polarized is the interaction, the more exacerbated is the confrontation, which ultimately will ask to probe the Fear Of Being at the very core of the 'take vs give' imbalance. The effects of such a confrontation is dual. We can either choose to embrace it to resolve the dilemma or reject it. Since rejection is often the consequence of fear, the avoidance rather translates the unwillingness to really change one's mind patterns, although it may give a sense of why things went wrong. But generally, people move on with the idea that there is a better match out there who will resolve their fear of giving or give as much in return. The Law of Balance will always prevent that as the inner balance has to be achieved first. It is the intensity of seduction that regulates the intensity of the confrontation, hence the inner challenges that must be probed. And this is what brings the seduction phase eventually to an end. Seduction is itself dual as a motion but in our hyper materialistic society praising egos and quest for domination, seduction is a dogma ruling the Economics of Sex. Such a widespread indoctrination of emotional polarities is rather the evidence of a steady social moral decline. More is said about it in the full version under 'Social Venality'.

The quest for Power has been and still is pervasive in every culture however. Up to these days, civilizations have equated Sex to Power, and this is very blatant in political intrigues, gossip magazines, films, literature and also the main drive behind the world sex slave trade – and even pedophilia. Power exploits what it deems materialistically seductive. The Empathic Currency section is recommended for further input.

In relationships, seduction is a double edged sword and generally its aftermath exposes our weakness to have fallen for it. Seduction is never what it seems like, is always a mirage fading away when Reality eventually catches up. This because seduction and passion are the best wounded ego band-aid but its effectiveness only lasts while it can as lovers cannot fix each other's disconnect with The Oneness. Seduction is a form of trade that fills the void induced by a feeling of aloneness reminding that any orgasmic pursuit can never be satiated. It is the failure to grasp the nature of seduction that brings back to the same outcome and disappoints, and this also holds true in all areas of life. When faced with the illusion of seduction, the monetary environment will often erase the last bit of seduction remaining and will then begin to determine The Economics of Sex within a relationship, as to whether it is worth maintaining such a status quo for the sake of so-called reasons and self-survival. Going down this road has tremendous implications as it is the sure path toward bitterness and ultimately the debasement and loss of Free Will, all of which drives many to seek counseling. More is said about it in The Trap of Psychoanalysis.

Force and Power form a polarity which means that the difference between the two is subtle and huge at once. Power coerces and manipulates and from Force emanates self-determination. Being in a position of power always implies to have access to information that others don't. Physically, Force is self-defense and Power, aggression. Power operates within the materialistic realm whereas Force within the Awareness of all things. Force is by extension not coercible as it refers to the Mind to affirm the self. The Cosmos evokes a Force onto Itself. Power breeds emotional boom and bust cycles, and 'perpetual wars for perpetual peace'. Force is Creation. Power, Destruction. In both energies flow the characteristics of the other which only the mind can balance to avoid the conflicts arising from walking too far from the thin line in the middle. To change the course of Mankind, Force through Self-Awareness is ultimately necessary to help develop an inner strength generating selfless actions and a greater self-control. Sexuality is above all the creative affirmation of Selflessness as a Force as it is which of the Oneness. It is the failure to comprehend the nature of this Force that makes one want to repeat the passionate lust game which will not only bring about new highs but also the next series of self delusions in its wake. The Aether Age Poised To Take Over

2: THE HOLISTIC BRAIN AND THE LEFT BRAINED CULTURE

Man can create only with his Mind -- and the brain is not the Mind. The brain is merely the seat of sensation and the electric recorder of sensation -

Walter Russell

The Electromagnetic Universe implies a Duality between the positive and negative which makes it possible for the current to flow and spread and sustain Life. That very Duality is encoded in Nature, which is why Humans have a brain with two hemispheres. The Holistic Brain is characterized by an harmonious interaction between the two sides. The brain doesn't create Consciousness because Consciousness exists outside the brain. The brain is the 'device' to connect with It. Any neuroscience research discarding Consciousness regards the brain a mere computer, and while it may be true to some extend, this stance is nonetheless a flawed programming denying the existence of a Greater Reality. But scientists are encountering more challenges as they have recognized that 'quantum theories' are the speculative and metaphysical foundations of Consciousness. Their investigations do not really lead anywhere but to the same question mark getting bigger as time goes by. However, there is a 'theory of everything' which does exist nonetheless and is manifested by 7 self-existing Principles as explained in the introduction of this book. Although all of them are continually and simultaneously at play, The Metaphysics of Sex essentially focuses on which of Mentalism, Correspondence, Gender and Polarity.

The Left Brain regulates logic, planning and authority structures, controls feelings but is also very survival oriented and therefore dominant. The Right Brain is dedicated to open ended questions, intuition, spirituality and creativity, is fluid and spontaneous and also nurturing and thus more passive. While the two sides of the brain split up tasks, they are also prompted to collaborate and remain in sync. Negatively, if either part becomes chronically dominant, the Left Brain also represents authoritarianism and rigid skepticism, all of which suppresses emotions whereas the Right Brain represents blind belief or naivete suppressing rational thinking.

Moreover, it isn't much important to be 'all knowing' but have the ability to holistically decipher emotions through the encoding of the 7 Principles, or Natural Laws, into brain patterns. Unfortunately, when a society is as much out of balanced and thus overpolarized as ours, the communication between the two hemispheres is deprived from its efficiency. If the brain doesn't operate well, how can societies favor more peaceful resolutions over wars for example? A disharmony in thought processing instills a lack of critical awareness. Such a brain is of course a lot more prone to be influenced as it has to cope with the same polarization mirrored by the environment back to it. Holographic Principle is a Natural Law dictating the awareness of the Mind Matrix, or Collective, which in turn determines the polarization level. A balanced brain is characterized by its flexibility to weigh downsides and upsides in any train of thought as nothing is neither entirely true nor false. Too much optimism often blinds one and too much negativity often initiates a radical change for the better. The philosophical issue at stake here is the following: Do we really need to go through states of blindness and radical changes? Since our physical reality implies that perfection doesn't exist, the focus on limiting as much as possible their occurrence should remain a priority at all time as it would make us happier as a result.

In the West and most part of the world, societies have predominantly been patriarchal, left brained oriented, imposing their definition of Gender, and especially the female sex, all of which surely explains why Feminism so rapidly took off. Although started with genuine intentions, the movement turned into another speculative market which subverted its initial aims. While there is more political background that may be interesting to point out, the aftermath only matters: Emancipation just added another layer of left brained issues to the already dysfunctional state of affairs between Genders. The core issue with Feminism is that it subtly or more blatantly glorifies female domination, exploiting the male components in women at their own detriment, and which men perceived as too confrontational. But since men have always been trapped by left brained views themselves, they cannot correct what it is. At this pace and if we carefully and objectively analyze relationships around us, most of them project an ever increasing Fear of Being.

The most obvious and recurrent left brain pattern is characterized by the militarization of societies and which thus dictates the notion of family values and Freedom in the broad sense. As a matter of fact, as long as war continues to exist, society will remain dreadfully imbalanced. By definition a balanced society is which offering diversity in thinking while empowering the Masculine and Feminine alike without which procreation brings about undesirable consequences. This aspect is given a lot more attention in the Empathic Society section. The Metaphysics Of Sex regards the choice to remain absolutely free from bounds and childless as valuable as any other one as long as there is such an agreement between those involved. For further input, the Hedonism section is recommended.

Pornography is another left-brain phenomenon that should be 'consumed' with the appropriate awareness as it induces the idea that bodies as mere objects and orgasm machines disconnecting from the Self. Sexuality is becoming more and more devoid of any profound emotions and favors fast-food-like pleasures instead. Consume and dispose, so to speak, and this approach denies the deep emotional inner working Sexuality requires to attain a long and lasting fulfillment, which when lacking reveals another left-brain side effect known as 'insatiable lust' being itself at the core of an ever increasing dissatisfaction. The Lust, Fear and Bondage section aims at delving further into the topic. Nowadays, the number of people seeing a shrink because of a failed sexual relationship is discombobulating. But since psychoanalysis is itself the byproduct of a left brained society, the cure is as bad as the problem.

Now a few words about the Divine Masculine and Sacred Feminine. The terms refer to a perfect balanced interaction between intellectual and psychic polarities above all, as both are aware of their dual natures emanating from their brain's hemispheres. The feminine containing masculine traits and otherwise. The New Age attempts to turn it into a spiritual movement is kind of misleading as its followers so rarely empathize on the Natural Law of Gender associated with it but its pagan origins and celebrations. New Age workshops, as a market practice, tend to sensationalize the terms therefore. While the latter may offer the beginning of an answer, this consumerist trend is another left brain imprint tainting and undermining the goal sought to achieve. As articulated in the Empathic Currency section, monetization is a left brain characteristic. The Metaphysics of Sex does not encourage such an approach and therefore exclusively relies on donations.

Consenting adults are absolutely free to express their Sexuality the way they wish, as long as they engage in it consciously. It is the level of Awareness that defines as to whether a behavior is going to harm or enhance one's life. And so far, Left Brained politics have coerced for much too long people's feelings, sexual orientation and family values alike - all of which eroding Free Will. (to be continued)

3: BONDAGE, FEAR & LUST

Action and reaction are equal and opposite, and are expressed simultaneously. Sequentially they are repeated in reverse, the reaction becoming the action and the action the reaction -- Walter Russell

This book will never stress it enough: without Dualism, or Polarity Principles, the Universe wouldn't exist and neither would emotions which are therefore expressed by two psychic opposite motions: Love and Fear. The Cosmic Mind which they originate from represents a state of perfect Equilibrium or Stillness. Being a human, a manifestation of Reality, implies that we cannot get rid of Dualism, no matter how hard we try. Moreover, trying to bypass or ignore it activates even more negative side effects. Love and Fear are as equally as important to guide the human mind on the path of Infinite Awareness. It is however when Self-Love shines within that Inner Fear can be overcome. One can spend years analyzing the environment to explain a reaction but doing this achieves little if no results because one's perception of an issue will forever remain subjective. There are as many perceptions of an event as the number of observers. In this sense, being judgmental doesn't lead anybody anywhere as challenges always match perceptions and projected intents.

The Metaphysics of Sex seeks to empathize on the electromagnetic balance dictating 'give and receive'. Just like anything else in life since we live in a 'Sexed Universe'. Without the awareness of what Polarities Principle entails and which implies that no behavior (between consenting adults) is by definition neither entirely right nor wrong, the Mind is condemned to circular thinking. Because societies are established 'reward systems' many appear to think that 'giving' will entitle to 'receive' at some point. This couldn't be farther from the truth as many give out of Fear to miss an opportunity or to appease whatever inner doubts, since a reward system trains societies to think in term of 'security'.

Fear is a mental construct rooted in the instinctive apprehension of the Unknown and Death - and sometimes a useful defense mechanism - but which when not comprehended morphs into an inextricable emotional Vortex. The transcendence of the instincts is the primary purpose in Man's Cosmic Evolution. All life stories express the same challenge: the 'Fear of being'. And our Left Brained society is of any help as it is designed to reinforce fears between Genders and impose whatever sexual orientation to prevent individuals from finding about their true selves. Aggression is the evidence of a Polarity Imbalance, as further explained in the Empathic Society. Instincts served Man for quite some time, when living in caves, but must be now let go and replaced with wisdom if we, as a species, really wish world peace. Psychoanalysis may have had some merits when it was discovered but became this imbroglio of causes and effects which no longer can be dealt with. Actually it often makes people even more confused as Dualism can reveal itself as a maze imprisoning the Mind.

conceive long-term solutions.

As J. Krishnamurti defines it: We are here to learn about Fear, not to escape from it. Most fears are deemed irrational in the sense that they are based on assumptions reflecting on the data at the moment of the inquiry and since 'The Nature of Reality' is ever changing, question marks keep surfacing regardless of which observation angle is chosen to assess any situation. Self-balancing thus also relies on the grasp of a Greater Reality to start with, this to allow the Holistic Brain (vibrational harmony between the two hemispheres) to form appropriate questions and

While the Fear of Sexuality does exist, Repression and Lust are two sides of the same coin. Abstinence versus little or no self-control. Abstinence is often a choice when the Fear of losing control is too great or may be used for self-healing, hence has a dual function. When used for self-healing, Abstinence becomes Asceticism whereas 'fear avoidance' is the best way to strengthen it further. Fear of Sexuality also morphs into Lust which mirrors the apprehension that orgasmic bliss could forever vanish at any moment. One wishes and seeks to repeat the highs but the tension required for them to be sustained always ends up falling short. It only is a matter of time due to an ever increasing latent fixation demanding an ever increasing creativity. Intercourse becomes the primary focus twisting all levels of rapport. When the side effects of Lust begin to fade, the 'intercourse blackmail' becomes apparent and emotional roller coasters often ensue. Anything is tried to get the 'fix' back to square one, and very often at this stage, many will engage in some typical rejection-attraction behavior as a last hope. Such a pattern is nerve racking. Unavoidably Lust is cursed to go bust, more or less rapidly and painfully depending on the realization of what is going on and the understanding that lusty passion is a double edged sword. As a matter of fact, many fail to comprehend what is occurring and will therefore opt to add another layer of confusion by projecting their frustrations bringing about the worse character's traits in those involved, instead of taking responsibility and beginning to probe why the inner Fear of Being took over. However, at this stage, it is often difficult to reverse the trend, unless awareness replaces resentment and sorrow. The patterns described in this paragraph highlight the dilemma of all relationships as Sexuality is metaphysically the most powerful Force in the Universe ruled by the Absoluteness of the Oneness Principle which manifests Itself in the form of an orgasm symbolizing the Force of Creation as further explained in the Unconditional Now section.

Bondage is the mere continuation of Lust going bust when not acted upon it. When one has become addicted to the ups and downs of sexual and emotional drama at the risk to lose one's self. With bondage comes also the Fear to walk away as the loss of self-confidence erodes the willingness to restart from scratch. When the bondage is severe enough, the relationship may become sexless. Some may endure a sexless relationship for a very long while, until a catalyst enters the picture. If the situation that led to this bondage isn't fully assimilated, Lust will resurface in the next relationship(s). Although seldom, and if the attachment is strong enough, thus genuine, a catalyst may eventually reignite the romantic aspect with brand new dynamics. A rock bottom doesn't always translate in the same outcome, depending on the spiritual and intellectual affinities to start with. Some again are destined to learn about the Fear Of Being with a very specific partner, others by crossing paths with various ones. More positively Lust also highlights a frantic desire to reconcile with the Absoluteness of the Oneness Principle but will tame itself as soon as the mind begins to align to the Latter.

In order to avoid the Lust and bondage entanglement, relationships cannot be approached with the gullibility found in movie cliches associating Sex with a miraculous band-aid formula. As a matter of fact, the more Lust at the beginning of a relationship, the more abrupt will the awakening be to the fact that it isn't. This because Sexuality is a paradox onto itself. A Force and Power at once. With Sexuality comes easily the idea to possess one another. To remain a Force and lead to expansion, its Metaphysics must be comprehended. There is no such a thing such as an innocent little fun, unless expectations are stated clearly from the very beginning, before the first intercourse. Sexuality devoid of any deep psychic attachment isn't necessarily a bad thing, unless it is a norm. Also, the male-female duality shouldn't be neglected. Most men tend to be into 'phallic securization' instinctively whereas most women who are more nurturing by nature will play innocently - or not - the seduction game thinking that a commitment will reward them. Women too easily embark on this 'phallic securization' as if going genuinely on a crusade, but too often end up losing big. Men will always tend to praise such a female ideal but in the process, they have little motivation to develop the need as how to surpass their prime Fear Of Being since the latter is being taken care of by a Fear of not nurturing enough. Women and men alike have to come to terms with such expectations.

Women have to become aware that nurturing something which cannot be satiated such as Lust springs from the Fear of Being. In this sense, most relationships do not expand but shrink in potential over time if failing reach an Equilibrium between Desire and Abstinence. Although Religious dogmas always fustigate Lust, none rationally explain the origin of this Dual Force we expose ourselves to when disrupting that very Natural Law. As a matter of fact, Desire and Abstinence are two motions whose trends have to even out as much as possible. The word Abstinence is preferred over Asceticism as it is matter of self-imposed balancing operating the same way than which of electrically recharging the inner flow, keeping the Fear of losing balance in check - whereas Asceticism rather invokes a longer self healing period of time.

This chapter does not attempt to exclude what is called 'sado-masochism' as this practice is an overt form of the challenges described above and thus has the same fundamental characteristics of what needs to be addressed if willing to change one's life style. Such patterns will be adopted by those willing to normalize their own bondage. However, such relationships, although extremely polarized, can only survive if there is enough room for exploration, otherwise they tend to collapse onto themselves over time. The Hedonism chapter offers more insight about this. (to be continued)

4: FREE WILL & SELF-LOVE

When our knowing exceeds our sensing, we will no longer be deceived by the illusions of our senses -- Walter Russell

The comprehension of the several Natural Laws mentioned in this work is essential since They do not only shape all forms of relationships but more importantly which with the Self. Natural Laws as demonstrated are immutable. Relationships are an extension of the Self. Emotions are holographic. Crises happen when the thinking sticks to old or rigid paradigms preventing Awareness from expanding, causing not only collective but individual history to repeat themselves. Consequences are often quite harmful. By adaptation to change it is meant coming to term with what it is that cannot be changed or finding a compromise. So when a Mind continually seeks and welcomes new approaches, it can rightfully be assumed that such a Mind is in a state of Self-Love, and of course has more Free Will. After all, the only Free Will that exists is the willingness to notice or not. Being humans also implies that perfection cannot be attained but knowing about such Mechanisms, greatly improves the quality of our perceptions of the Whole and is thus enhancing inner and world peace.

The idea of Free Will that most people have is either narrow or erroneous as the Collective is built upon a social reward system taking more than what it puts in as Power and playing by its rules motivates society. A reward system is characterized by an imbalance between investment and profit so to speak. As expounded in the Empathic Currency, profit cannot exist without investing as little as possible. There is no such a thing in Nature which organized Herself to remain in Equilibrium, one way or another. Power thus subverts this Equilibrium. The 'act of giving' has to be voluntarily equal to the 'act of receiving', though without 'giving', 'receiving' is impossible and this means that 'act of giving' is a Natural Law. It works the same way for relationships. Investment in a relationship is called 'Integrity', a value so rarely in sync with seduction. Most people withhold information. hence misrepresent themselves, at the beginning of a relationship, and this will eventually set into motion a 'give and receive' disharmony due to distorted expectations. This misrepresentation is not always intentional but caused by the projection that a new romance will bring about an inner change. As long as giving and receiving even out, the interaction is highly satisfying. Paradoxically, such an Alchemy can turn out especially draining when it comes to sexual activity because it is almost impossible to indefinitely sustain the attraction level of the first intercourse, unless resorting to voluntary Abstinence to re-energized the inner flow. However, expecting rewards or leaving somebody in a state of unbalanced expectations is what exhausts and debases sensual intensity. Balanced expectations do not cause disrespect nor harm whereas the aftermath of 'Lust and Bondage' rather leaves an impression of emptiness within. Free Will has thus little to do with the 'spur of the moment', if nothing at all, but the grasp of the Principle of Correspondence initiated by the 'act of giving' and the awareness that Abstinence is also needed to pace and enhance sexual activity. Such dynamics does not only regulate Sexuality but also all other areas of Life. There also cannot be any Self-Love by extension when replacing an action-reaction with another that exhibits the same coercive patterns at its core.

While Psychoanalysis highlights the failure of the model, its hugest flaw is that it never questions the foundations of the latter but deems unfit whoever that doesn't fit in. The Trap Of Psychoanalysis offers a new glimpse at the ancient and Mythological Archetypes that have shaped the world we live in, and why it is about time to let them go. Self-Love and Free Will go thus hand by hand, although the Second is the consequence of the First. As explained in Bondage and Lust, the Fear of Being is at the core of what holds back to further explore Self-Love, its counter or dual motion. The Fear Of Being and Self-Love need one another to coexist and give Man a life purpose. Without a resistance there is no progression. Most people in a romantic relationship do not achieve Self-Love but rather seek a confirmation of their own subjective reality whereas Self-Love is an objective state of being continually challenged by deeply polarized social frameworks. As a matter of fact, until age six or seven, children record everything they hear and see as if in hypnosis mode. Our reward based system is a program. The latter too often determines the later life and makes Self-Love appear as a fantasy steadily eroding a relationship. The lack of Objective Self Image eventually leads to the realization that Lovers appear different over time from who they were in the beginning - but in the process they will gain insight about their polarized selves and be given the opportunity to change if they want to.

There is no model to achieve Self-Love however, simply because each human is a Fractal of The Whole and therefore has his own unique perception about the meaning of Reality. Today societies are about to fall off the cliff because of the models they have imposed. Under such circumstances, the majority of people may not be monogamous but rather force themselves into commitments to fit a construct, that one is born a workaholic and to raise children since a very early age. And as a result, children are too passed on the same misconceptions bringing about the same Fear of Being. It is thus not surprising that parents will often witness in their offspring the questions they haven't themselves resolved. Lifestyles have to be motivated by a genuine conscious choice, the problem is that education as a whole offers very restricted possibilities as our psyches are constantly under holographic pressure.

Very few know what Free Will really entails and way too many think that celebrities and the porn industry have the answers for them. Sexuality has always been controlled as it is the surest fashion to keep people extremely polarized. High polarization subverts the Principle of Gender and generates all sorts of inner conflicts leading one to believe that a certain behavior is preferable over others. One thing is certain though: where there is 'Lust-Bondage' there isn't any Free Will nor Self-Love but Fear of Being. A true Free Will advocate does not act under pressure but aims at mastering self-control and an objective state of being while remaining open to experiences.

Nothing is a given and every option has dual aftermaths. Succumbing seduction too often comes with a price tag, which is the end of an illusion instilling resentment, remorse and or a lack of Empathy. The total loss of sexual balance can only translate into its opposite, self imposed Abstinence or voluntary Asceticism. It is all about learning when to let it go and refrain oneself. Every compulsive behavior seeks to be satiated and thus to tame itself, aspires to a temporary reprieve.

Instead of understanding the mechanism of Duality, this reprieve can be felt as being forced upon one. The Principle or The Law of Correspondence, consequence between cause and effect, should be regarded as the karma of over-sexualized and repressive societies alike, which leaves the imprint of a disconnect from the Self in their wake while keeping the Body, Mind and Spirit framed into low frequencies facilitating further collective programming.

The Metaphysics of Sex operates within very specific paradigms. As a matter of fact, even Hedonism has its own sets of rules one has to go by to be an enriching experience. There is no Sexual Freedom nor Self-Love without knowing about the boundaries of polarization and having a partner - or lovers - aware of it too as unfettered excitements end up recreating the same bondage one wishes to escape from. 5: THE TRAP OF PSYCHOANALYSIS

Action has meaning only in relationship, and without understanding relationship, action on any level will only breed conflict. The understanding of relationship is infinitely more important than the search for any plan of action -- Jiddu Krishnamurti

Psychoanalysis has long track records of being questioned and doubted by various trains of thought. The Metaphysics Of Sex is itself a work inspired by several sources and merely offers another view against it. Nothing new has really been discovered about the Mind and Consciousness since The Mystery Schools, two thousands years or so ago, which themselves had mastered a much more Ancient Knowledge that seems to have existed since the beginning of Humanity. Over the centuries, mainstream philosophers linking 'emotion' to 'intuition' have always been at odds with those praising the values of 'reason' and 'logic', and such dual trends emerged because they both refute that the core issue is definitely Esoteric. Instead, they have spent their time focusing on either the Left or Right Brain. The esoteric aspect can only be perceived when probing the interaction between Intuition and Reason to uncover the Holistic Brain. Each side of spectrum alone cannot unveil the other side. Both sides are one. Nihilism and Atheism are the left-brained consequences of such a fragmentation whereas religious dogmas became the right-brained gatekeepers of the Maze of Consciousness by exploiting the Natural Law of Dualism to deter followers to find out about the Oneness. Such an important fundamental voids all differences between such dogmas.

Over the last two decades, neurology has remarkably demonstrated that Consciousness exists outside the brain but has persistently been more interested in exploring the brain as a computer device. This left brained approach debases the uniqueness of the Self and can be used to induces faulty and harmful programmings. Neural sciences as a whole have embarked on a war on the Mind to bypass and control Consciousness. Moreover and not so surprisingly, Psychiatry adds new cognitive dysfunctions yearly to its lexicon, which are in fact the symptoms of an ever increasing Body, Mind and Consciousness disconnect. Epigenetic Research is about to change this but the academic resistance still is considerable. Consciousness is the Field uniting the Mind and Body but which is somehow neutral as the brain responds whatever educational programming, and if the programming is inadequate, Consciousness releases low level vibrations that also can affect the Body. Although matter is conscious, the understanding of Consciousness, at a human level, is not a given as the Mind must be aware of It in the first place and then from there expand. The pace of expansion is different for everybody, and this explains why not two minds think alike: both have their unique perception about reality. The Mind must be aware of the Oneness to operate rightfully and conceive the Greater Reality which is purely objective. The Greater Reality implies the comprehension that all subjective realities express different views of the same Dual Phenomenon emanating from a Source also referred as the Oneness, Prime Cause or Field, Cosmic Mind or Aether. Ultimately, the Aether commands Electromagnetism without which Life and Thought cannot be propagated. Sciences would make a big leap forward and begin to serve Humanity if probing this Prime Cause instead of Its side effects.

Psychoanalysis, its main pitfall, is its refusal to tackle the Greater Reality and the Oneness Principle, hence exploiting Dualism to enforce norms. If we take a sincere and closer look, to some degree, we all mimic our parents' relationship history which themselves repeat that of their own parents and so on. Unresolved conflicts are passed on to the next generation. The irrefutable evidence, since it also occurs on a grand scale, is that societies do the exact same thing, and this with the ensuing disastrous consequences as explained in The Empathic Society.

The Collective, the Mind Matrix, simply highlights the fact that unresolved conflicts at an individual level always impacts the whole and unless each human becomes aware of his own Fear Of Being, the Mind Matrix, cannot improve, and even worse, is the root cause of social upheavals. Just like people undergoing a couch therapy lamenting about their parents, masses whine about social and geopolitical issues.

Psychoanalysis' advocacy to break free from parental behavior and influence rather anchors the conflict even deeper as the emotional attachment to the parents play out as an resistance to achieve freedom from thoughts. By resistance it is meant that Power, psychic rebellion, must be used to detach oneself from the very bound. And this is impossible because Power derives from Fear. And Fear is but an illusion which the higher Self must surrender to instead of fighting it. There lies the explanation of so many therapy failures since 'Love is all that is' within The Oneness Principle and which is why dissonance cannot be resolved by another layer of conflict but Empathy. The blame game is a pervasive dualistic social template. Rebellion, or anger, itself is the obstacle as coming to terms with one's own Fear of Being, requires self-forgiveness to heal itself. And this is observable on a larger scale too. Revolutions, in that sense, have all failed their aims, the world is still dealing with oppression and a threshold is getting close to being reached. Freedom for Fear is to comprehend and process it. Less Fear means more Self-Love and more Self-Love means more Freedom and of course Empathy toward one another. One way or another, the Mind Matrix and the Cosmic Mind must remain in a state of Equilibrium - as much as possible. The thinking that rebellion is needed to break free is the result of social Archetypes that have been revered since ever and were born along with Mythologies. The Latter are the framework of Psychoanalysis and various social concepts today. They also are the fetish of the entertainment industry. Mythologies narrate stories of narcissism and a thirst for Power between gods and semi-gods, fights with monsters or dark entities. This pattern of 'good versus evil' is definitely recurrent and still describes modern human interactions. To win the Love of the Self and being appreciated by others one must compete and/or kill - literally or figuratively. The outside must be changed to secure something or someone, and the expense can be calculated in sufferings imposed on others or self-defeat. The materialistic interpretation of Archetypes is another left brained application fueling social conflicts and also justifying the structure of any reward based system. It is only when the 'alchemic' meaning of the Archetypes is restored that we begin to unveil the full scope of their esoteric multidimensional rapport with the Mentalism and Gender Principles, and which C. G Jung had probed quite deeply. Unfortunately Jung's work never really took off as mainstream psychoanalysis chose to follow a materialistic approach undermining the true human nature.

There lies the inextricable dilemma of the Archetypes most humans emulate more or less unconsciously and is passed on from a generation to the next. There cannot be any external change without changing the mindset first. The Laws of Dualism and Mentalism are here to stay as they are essential to inner betterment and understanding of the Mind Matrix. Willing to get rid of them, ignore, bypass or exploit them is what causes social upheavals and individual disharmony. One of the main purposes of Life, if not ultimately the most important, is our own journey to reunite with Cosmic Mind, The Oneness, by processing the Fear of Being and comprehending why Fear is but a distortion. In this sense Psychoanalysis doesn't heal the Self but keeps alive one's inner fragmentation, hence imperils the connection with the Oneness.

Moreover Psychoanalysis has not only affected the way we think in term of Archetypes but deeply altered the Natural Law of Vibration, the meaning of 'vocabulary' and structural phraseology. How the language is spoken and the choice of the vocabulary has been drastically applied to the Left Brain mind's patterns damaging one's sense of logic. This evidence of a vibratory modification that doesn't resonate with the Holistic Brain instills further inner conflicts jeopardizing or twisting interactions. The words which have the most been affected by this framework are without a doubt: peace, freedom, war and slavery. But there is a myriad of other ones whose definitions have gone through a lot more subtle alteration. Although it would be exhaustive, if not impossible, to list them all, we can easily notice them when communicating and realizing one's mental blocks or that of others, and which happen when the opposition between the Left and Right Brain is too huge, whereas the characteristic of the Holistic Brain is which to process all incoming data spontaneously because of an insatiable self-existing curiosity guiding a perpetual need for emotional balance within. More realistically, Psychoanalysis didn't create the alteration of Language, which too self-exists within the Law of Vibration to start with but foresaw the advantage to anchor, mold and monopolize Western thinking (to be continued)

6: HEDONISM

All matter is electric. All matter is conditioned into greater or lesser strains according to the intensity of desire which is the cause of all electric strain to which it is subjected. The farther removed from rest, the greater the strain or tension. That which we call high electric potential is merely great strain to maintain a condition which is far from the condition of rest -- Walter Russell

The topic of sexual Liberty is a very daunting one as each individual has his own definition about it. To sort this fractal-like equation out we ought first to ask: what is Liberty to start with? A complex question with a simple answer: Liberty is symbolized by non-coercive actions occurring between people. But since there must be a resistance for Self Awareness to expand, coercion does exist within, in the motion of the Fear of Being. The less Fear of Being, the more Liberty - or Freedom - and not only sexually but in the broad sense. To objectively know one's Self has to remain a primary drive at all time otherwise any experience will just reawake the same dilemmas and as it often is the case, even exacerbate them. It is quite common, however, to engage in some hedonistic pursuit for a while then all of a sudden, and no matter how pleasurable the latter is, run into an dilemma demanding to requestion the very experience. This happens when Self Awareness can no longer expand due to the depletion of the inner energy flow, causing a Synchronicity Collapse, which is often perceived as the consequence of other external factors. Everything happens for a reason. Too much positive leads to its opposite - and otherwise. The fact that Polarities are interchangeable teaches the importance of remaining centered as much as possible, or there is a great risk of disharmony. That is precisely why religious dogmas vilify sexual Liberty but also foresee the possible awakening to full Awareness through Sexuality as an even bigger menace. We live in a Sexed Universe and this means that Sexuality is a Force to connect 'directly' with The Oneness. Hedonism and voluntary monogamy are polar opposites and both may lead to the same aftermath if understanding the Metaphysics of Sex, its esoteric sacredness.

The Metaphysics of Sex considers as hedonistic any relationship involving more than two lovers, such as polyamory to some extent, bisexuality, sex groups and sometimes sado-masochism which is a category on its own because it is a lifestyle that normalizes Lust-Bondage entanglements, and thus about power. Interestingly, dominance and submissiveness in that type of relationship is very blurred as such ends of the spectrum merge to the point that the dominant side perceives itself as submissive and otherwise. Switching to such extremes on a regular basis can only be sustained if there is enough creativity to revive the power game.

Nonetheless, most embarking on such a path eventually end up, no matter how long it takes, to abandon sado-masochism because they have explored all possible combinations and tamed their polarities within. The polyamory lifestyle cannot be entirely considered as hedonistic as such a lifestyle also implies a Love motion as opposed to the quest for pleasure, unless it clearly establishes the casual aspect outside the main relationship. Generally singles, and males more than females, do not fit well in the hedonistic template, unless they are on a quest for a matching companion.

Hedonism is thus a fashion to explore such paths and to have a enriching conclusion, Self-Love has to be a prime motivation or that such an intent has to lead to that revelation. The success or setback generally appears in the outcome and will result in either frustrations or liberation. As previously argued in section 3, Lust is such an extreme polarity that it often seeks to tame itself or fosters disruptive ups and downs, hence brings about either a reprieve or frustration. Frustration will often drive to repeat the experience, sometimes mindlessly, until a break point occurs whereas liberation will often lead to the discovery of another dimension of the Self Image. The break point manifests an opening for the Mind to realize and achieve a temporary liberation from Dualism. Temporary because Dualism cannot be avoided and exists as a Principle to perfect our emotions and recognize our weaknesses, in other words, become better humans and ultimately, discover Selflessness as a Force.

These days, Hedonism seems to be everywhere because Sex always sells, and thus has fallen prey to the Left-Brained society we live in. Despite the so many 'circles' offering pleasure, there isn't much Hedonism in this economic landscape but the opportunity to access a quick boost to cope with the daily routine, though one may encounter a few real Hedonists hanging out at those happenings. The challenge is which mentioned in the Economics Of Sex. Too often pairs of lovers or spouses mainly choose Hedonism because they either seek to spice up their fading intimacy (relationship could be at stake) or consider the move as authorized cheating to secure the future. If there is any materialistic aim, such as regarding Sex as an investment tool, Hedonism is not going to be fulfilling but rather used as an escape from the Fear Of Being.

Although Sex has always fascinated and sold, the Commerce of Sex breeds more conflicts that it resolves them, unless it is devoid from the slightest romantic or even friendly attachment, what is observable in pornographic movies. Though the way Pornography is perceived is misleading because actors, no matter how liberated they claim to be, evolve in a such extreme left brained reality, that their personal lives are real emotional roller coasters. Money and emotions just do not mix, and when it happens that they do, the first always allows the second to take over for the better. This works on every level, not just Sexuality. The geopolitical trends sensationalizing fears to further control is a negative example. The same holds true for the Commerce of Sex sensationalizing orgasmic bliss to increase the need for Lust which is the materialistic expression of Sex. While Materialism disturbs the Law of Balance it also prompts to realign our minds with the same Cosmic Mind enabling this perpetually creating Universe. 'As Above so Below' is a Theosophical Axiom. Only the Mind can dictate such Natural Laws by embracing them in the first place as explained in the Unconditional Now and the Empathic Society.

The Commerce of Sex mirrors our fragmented connection with the Oneness, and one way or another, the Cosmic Mind will remind us of Its all encompassing Force. The upside is that monetized hedonistic circles do exist to show why the mainstream attitude towards Sex has to break through its own paradigm. It is useful to remember the 'love mantra' of the Hippie Movement, which mainly failed because it preached and sold promiscuity enhanced by the commerce of drugs, therefore exploiting extremely polarized emotions, which eventually brought the movement down.

Although Sexuality's primary drive is to learn about Fear and master Self-Love, Hedonism is a path highlighting this even more. The fact is that the quest for Self-Love allows to overcome the temptation to use Sexuality as a power tool and/or be dominated by it. Becoming better lovers has little to do with 'quantity' but 'quality'; and quality will forever depends on Self-Love. Being overly preoccupied with seduction and sexual performance rather indicates a need for inner healing and probing the Fear of Being. Engaging in Hedonism thinking it is going to satiate sexual appetite brings about a tension demanding to repeat the experience over and over, until a break point is reached. The latter may translate into a sudden loss of interest combined with an impression of boredom or the understanding that Hedonism becomes a lot more enriching when practiced every now and then and not monetized. It is utterly important to notice those patterns for the sake to bring about more happiness in our lives, but also along with the understanding that for happiness to exist it has to be continually challenged by our ever changing, dual Physical Reality. The Quest For An Hedonistic Mate

7: LOVE AND THE UNCONDITIONAL NOW

All opposites of all kinds extend from a mutual equator which is their common unity, and to that equator they must eventually return in order to repeat. Every pair must become one in order to again become two. Men and women do not escape this two-way reciprocative law. Each becomes what the other is. Both are always compromising each other's unbalance. If the two unbalances are equal and opposite, each type will survive and grow mentally, spiritually and physically. If the two unbalanced mates are unequal in their opposition, the penalty is degeneration - mentally, spiritually and physically. The quality of one mate is a compromise with the quality of the other. The pattern resulting from this spiritual, mental and moral development is compromised for good or bad by every contact between them - no matter how slight. This is true even outside the sex union - Walter Russell

Matter comes to life through a Cosmic Mind in a perpetual orgasmic state. From this very state emanates Electricity and Magnetism, shaping all existing atoms, Matter being compressed Light. Therefore is Matter conscious. Therefore is Thought an expression of the Cosmic Mind. It only is when a human mind comprehends the Love vs Fear mechanisms that it lives in the Unconditional Now, when the search for Infinite Awareness surpasses the Fear of Being at the root of any polarized and dualistic thinking. There always is a third and right choice, which brings about a new set of dualities along with another third valid option - and so on. Even though there often seems to exist multiple choices, only one of them is correct. This because The Unconditional Now is a Natural Law unto itself (comprising the 7 Principles) and which eventually jeopardizes any long-term projections. Many happen to rethink their choices later on when realizing projections didn't hold its promises and/or leave them with additional unexpected burdens. The third option will always sound a lot more complex to achieve but offer more long-term solutions. Any choice following the path of the least resistance or resulting in more competitive and social behaviors cannot enhance Life. In other words, the less Fear about the future, the more steady and flexible become romantic patterns.

Being overly preoccupied with the long-term future causes more 'left-brained' problems in the now. This Duality is inescapable. Moreover, it teaches us to follow our passions and dreams. Seeking to control romantic moods and outcomes is what causes irrational worries. Love represents an infinite creativity always occurring in the now and goes by the Natural Law of Cause and Effect, or Synchronicity. Just like for an artist or scientist meticulously working step by step and giving a daily undivided attention to their goal with their minds. Any human being can sense or feel a state of Love but many do not know how to set it into motion because of external or/and internal coercive factors.

Infinite Awareness, represented by the 'all seeing eye' in esoteric teachings, is the trait of a human mind always seeking to overcome Dualism with a third option as Knowledge is boundariless. The third choice exists for Free Will to express itself outside of any controlling structure and circular or linear thinking. The third choice is always found by compressing or merging of the two opposing ones, all of which means that possibilities are endless and the esoteric foundation of The Empathic Society. The Unconditional Now is the field of action of a Mind always accepting how things are, it is the only fashion to find out about a third choice. Being in Love is a state of Mind that allows this.

Love seeks to expresses Itself in all relationships, romantic or not. Empathy, compassion and respect are Its derived motions and cannot be enforced in any way. Forcing one's will or perceptions onto a partner or lover will just aggravate conflicts, and even possibly paving the way for a breakup. The Unconditional Now will always reveal itself, if the relationship is destined to expand, that qualities and flaws complete one another. The lacks of one is resolved by the qualities of the other - and otherwise. A pair has to be complementary but also allow Free Will to continually challenge this complementarity . This is the only way to make any relationship last. Although the term 'soul mate' is kind of a new age distortion making one fantasize about what is perceived as the right companion to achieve Equilibrium, a mind achieving Self-Love will tend to seek balance with similar minds as much too aware of the 'Lust and Bondage' entanglement. For many, this quest for Equilibrium can only come at the expense of a dilemma whose intensity is regulated by the willingness to precisely achieve Self-Love. Being in a soul mate relationship -therefore doesn't especially translate into an interaction within which everything continually flows organically but is defined by the perfect match in terms of flaws and qualities. This to say that there are many wandering soul mates which will eventually cross path, whatever the chosen lifestyle. The term 'soul mate' isn't systematically a singular nor does it always imply a romantic bound.

There is no model for Love to manifest as the Unconditional Now, although there are three possibilities. The first one is 'spontaneous faithfulness or monogamy' which characterizes mates organically drawn to each other. Serial monogamy is a stretched version of it and is the most widespread trend and doesn't imply always faithfulness. The second is 'spontaneous loving' characterized by a polyamory lifestyle openly involving at least two - steady or not - relationships. And the third, 'universal loving' characterized by the choice to remain a single evolving without any kind of deep and long term bound, and which also is generally adopted by those who wish to experience long periods of time of Asceticism as their own connection to The Oneness is a constant primary drive. The word Asceticism is preferred over Abstinence as the Latter isn't always voluntary.

The problem is that the mainstream education does only regard 'monogamy' as a paramount. This programming is quite harmful because a mind always seeks to expand and experience and when prevented from doing so by external coercive factors - and the ensuing Fear of the consequences of escaping a social mold that doesn't resonate within - will systematically generate growing frustrations and bitterness that will be blamed on the partner or lover rather than questioning the dogma itself. The Fear Of Being is always at the core of a dissonant Inner Self, and unfortunately mating choices will too often reflect just that. The fact is that 'spontaneous monogamy' is an unachievable aim for the majority due to a third option forever existing outside Dualism and which the Greater Reality makes available to balance and challenge any train of thought. Polygamy isn't mentioned as an option here as it is the most left-brained and coercive concept in term of relationship in modern societies but whose paradigm only works out in the case of remote and primitive tribes.

Dogmas as a whole induce sharp reality-conflicts and thus are all polarized expressions of our Physical Reality. And such conflicts distort the Self Image, and when the Self Image is being compromised, so are lifestyle choices. The Western society is now seeing an accumulation of dualities governing sexual orientations and gender wars that can only end with a Synchronicity Collapse, in other words, the end of all dogmatic values at once. Today most people are 'serial monogamous' and relationships end when failing to see beyond Dualism, highlighting the irrationality of monogamy as a dogma. Serial monogamy will only have a positive outcome if the perception of the Self can expand, otherwise the next relationship is condemned to repeat the mistakes of the previous one.

Nowadays, seldom are those 'organically wired' for monogamy and it is most likely 'designed' to be this way, as The Unconditional Now is itself dual but will always mean to surrender to what it is and one's true Self. For the many, surrendering to what it is will translate into a sense of having failed to achieve happiness, while some will find their path out of the Maze and change their approach radically. This doesn't need to be way but will remain so as long as societies are unable to access this Esoteric Knowledge. Not that it would significantly increase the number of organically wired monogamous but surely allow the exploration of the meaning of Sexuality as a fashion to probe and develop Self Love, which is the foundation of Love, and all its derived motions, within any type of relationship - along with the betterment of our rapport with the world as well.

ESCAPE FROM FREEDOM

The fear of the possibility of Chaos is the fear of true Freedom -- Mark Passio

You know, if we understand one question rightly, all questions are answered. But we don't know how to ask the right question. To ask the right question demands a great deal of intelligence and sensitivity. Here is a question, a fundamental question: is life a torture? It is, as it is; and man has lived in this torture centuries upon centuries, from ancient history to the present day, in agony, in despair, in sorrow; and he doesn't find a way out of it. Therefore he invents gods, churches, all the rituals, and all that nonsense, or he escapes in different ways. What we are trying to do, during all these discussions and talks here, is to see if we cannot radically bring about a transformation of the mind, not accept things as they are, nor revolt against them. Revolt doesn't answer a thing. You must understand it, go into it, examine it, give your heart and your mind, with everything that you have, to find out a way of living differently. That depends on you, and not on someone else, because in this there is no teacher, no pupil; there is no leader; there is no guru; there is no Master, no Saviour. You yourself are the teacher and the pupil; you are the Master; you are the guru; you are the leader; you are everything. And to understand is to transform what is. I think that will be enough, won't it? -- Jiddu Krishnamurti

Much has been written about our controlling and coercive structures and as of yet, many world citizens don't realize that they stand at crossroads and that their future will depend on their ability to notice what is really going on to change the course of events shaking the planet. The Empathic Society won't rehash any of such facts but will delve into the core issues, to explain people's disempowerment or complacency in the face of a scourge that seems to have existed since the beginning of times. That very scourge is a byproduct of the Fear of Being. The responsibility of being humans.

Since about eons, all cultures and races have attempted to define and regulate the notions of 'good' and 'evil' while remaining bent on invasions, wars, pillage and oppression by whatever means and for the sake of religious righteousness and ideologies alike. Yet there is this widespread Consensus that cannot imagine existence without rulers, even the most tyrannical, as if there can't be any other choice. Or should it rather be said that the only other choice can't be even considered because the same Consensus systematically assumes that chaos would ensue. It is thus easy to conceive as why the demand for any ruling power is associated with an inner fear that just morphs the latter into another menace eventually becoming very real. And this holographic reality shapes the Fear ever perpetuating the Escape from Freedom.

The Consensus is that war is a fatality of life, that Nature condemns man to remain an animal and fall prey to immorality because She made him cruel, gullible and greedy. The problem with such a Consensus is that it breeds a mindset disrespecting life as a whole, and thus immoral. The paramount of this immorality is without a doubt the 'business' of military interventions and silently watching or supporting them. That immorality springs from the ignorance of the Cause and Effect, a Natural Law, setting into motion a dual dynamics that will eventually turn against those who did nothing. Holographic Reality being a Natural Law, nobody should feel safe when allowing the perpetuation of destruction enforced upon others. As long as humans tolerate the act of war, don't request the dismantlement of standing armies, it will remain impossible to thrive and begin to reinvent the meaning of societies.

Considering the war and peace cycles, what to think of family values when parents agree with policies that will eventually condemn their offspring to face war? How can the pro-life movement, against abortion, even think that it is doing the right thing trying to protect life when turning a blind eye to the enrollment into the army? Analyzing the phenomenon of war is highly discombobulating because it voids all values attributed to life, not to mention also questions man's made laws giving any ruling powers the absolute right over life and death, and that the 'art of killing' regulates world economies as explained in the Empathic Currency section. War is the glue that holds all those contractions together. There are many human rights organizations whose goals are the focus on humanitarian aid as the result of war and even claim to impose peace by arms.

We live in a 'culture of death' that springs from the assumption that man is an animal and which is a very faulty one as man has the dominion over the animal kingdom. He can alter Nature and even destroy Her, what animal cannot do. Unlike animals, man is able to imagine a long term future. Although animals are subjected to Nature, they do not disturb Nature's Equilibrium as a whole. Man has a mind to understand Her and his understanding can go both ways. He can either dominate human nature by making man believe that he is cursed to remain an animal to start with, or use Natural Laws for his betterment. In other words, it is his choice to remain an animal or not. Objectively speaking though, man cannot even be an animal since he can alter Nature. When behaving so, he just becomes a 'beast' of destruction. So the only choices for man is either Enlightenment or self-made extinction due to the inexorable and exponential trend of technology. The mindset hasn't changed for about millennia but the 'art of killing'. Today, it is possible to annihilate the planet in a few minutes. And it seems like it is the path the world is taking if man keeps failing to realize that his lack of Empathy and Self Love are at the core of the issue.

As a matter of fact, Empathy has always been the answer to resolve conflicts but since the Consensus ignored it for so long, an insidious countdown has started with the advance of technology, especially which in the field of weaponry and makes it obvious as why Empathy must resonate within and exposes power as the paramount of all illusions. Power requires Fear to be sustained and has thrown Humanity into a 'polarity vortex' that only Empathy can bring back to Equilibrium. There is a second way to look at this and which becomes crystal clear if understanding the extreme dualism of the current opposing forces at play. The Fear of the consequences versus an ever growing global thirst for absolute power. It is only a matter of time for a breaking point to occur and cause a Singularity Collapse by merging both sides of the spectrum and initiated by the Oneness Principle as a Force pushing Itself through whether we grasp it or not. The Oneness Principle is an inalienable Supreme Natural Law that could allow the obliteration of Mankind, unless we choose the path of Enlightenment. It is an absolute Truth which destroys all lies when the latter reach their final and exponential phase. The Oneness Principle needs Dualism to express Itself but rules over It. Fighting or ignoring Dualism always fuels more antagonism. It is not without a reason as why all religious dogmas warn about some kind of 'dreadful judgment day' in their own words. Such a day doesn't need to happen but an individual wake up call.

How humans regard themselves just depends on the their programing, and if the latter teaches that legalized mass murder for a greater good must occur, most will endure cycles of utter upheavals but also be tempted to fool the system at their own level because hopelessness rules over their hearts, and which also explains why corruption is the foundation of the system, and which in turn gullibility ends up condoning. By gullibility it is meant waiting for a savior who will fix and save the world. Rationally speaking, if large scale legalized and organized murders are deemed perfectly acceptable, why would anybody taking part in any underground criminal organization or financial ponzi schemes even question his actions? If 'the too big to fail' can get away with a slap on the wrist, why would street gangs dissolve, why would anybody stop using whatever system's loopholes? If when people turn on their televisions and see so much geopolitical and fictional bloody violence, why would they refrain themselves from cheating the system at their own level at all?

Most people care about ethics and want to live honestly but if social rules and codes of conduct are designed to suit such a predatory framework, one's sense of honesty isn't going to - nor can - be rewarded. And never will be since a competitive framework also prevents from being genuine as stated in The Empathic Currency section under 'Speculation And The Subversion Of Society'. Most people are resentful toward the system but allow its continuation because they give away their consent, and their submission is at the core of a low self-esteem eroding the willingness to change what is. Ultimately, the Self-Love motion, or the lack there of, governs all human interaction as explained in The Metaphysics of Sex.

Because of this century-old submissive mind pattern, the latter also regulates education, which in turn dictates the Consensus to apply 'power and rules' wherever it does see fit. The aftermath here is that a mind being ruled seeks to rule at its own level and imposes upon others its own definitions of good and evil, themselves determined by its experiences and knowledge. And that is where everything gets even more intricate as each individual mind thinks in different terms, there simply aren't two minds thinking alike. The consequence is a multi-layer of seeking-to-rule-perceptions fragmenting the Collective furthermore, to a point of no return. It is the situation we are faced with since feelings are expressed along those lines, cutting off all possibilities to speak out one's mind because of the pervasive 'ruler game'. The Fear to disturb each other's mode of thinking and experiences prevails and polices the sanitization of thoughts. But how long can it last, how long can one live under such an ever increasing internal and external pressure? What is called 'free speech' is no longer of any help either as there is a systemic drain of self-depreciation prevailing and instilling resentment and the latter can only express itself with anger. And anger doesn't lead very far but brings about more dualistic road blocks. Not to mention the very silent but insidious generational-long compounding side-effects encrypted in our DNA.

Epigenetics has brilliantly demonstrated that emotions are genetically passed on from a generation to the next. Psychoanalysis can't address such a scientific evidence but a deep Awareness of the Oneness Principle. Although the issue sounds highly complex, it can be understood quite easily if the questions strike at the core. The challenge resides in letting go a model that has done nothing but led to this Crisis in Consciousness and which only the Holistic Brain can address by reprogramming ourselves. There cannot be any fruitful action as long as each individual doesn't allow an Inner Revolution taking place. The One and the Whole being holographic, the Inside has to heal to harmonize with the Outside and end the Escape from Freedom paradigm. (to be continued)

WILL WE EVER GET OUT OF MONETARY SERVITUDE?

The sum total of each man's giving determines the standard of man's civilization. Unity of man has always been impossible in a world of fear and discontent where every man fears every other man as an enemy -- Walter

Russell

Man's power lies in giving. He must learn to give as Nature gives. Each half of a cycle eternally gives to the other half for re-giving. Nature forever unfolds into many for the purpose of refolding into one. Each individual must manifest this universal law. The desire of some so-called 'apron string' parents to run their children's lives for them, often claiming that they have sacrificed their very own lives for them, are taking from their children - not giving. They are taking away the initiative children need to complete their own cycles: they must live their own lives for themselves. Man must know the principle of Creation: giving between each interchanging opposite half of each cycle for the purpose of repeating its giving. This is universal law and each individual must manifest this law. Man will forever war with man until he learns to give his all with the full expectation of equal receiving, and never taking that which is not given as an earned reward for his giving -- Walter Russell

To answer this question, one has first to ask: is chasing money and wealth accumulation the sole purpose of Life? If Life is all about it, seeking any spiritual path doesn't make any sense. So why were mythologies and religious dogmas created the first place? Intuitively, man knows that he has to surrender to all encompassing Force existing outside the realm of his perception, and this brings about the Fear of Being along with the ensuing fear of his own finitude. So in order to overcome this feeling of aloneness, man is prompted to find an escape by manifesting creativity, and each of his innovations are passed onto the next generations, which in turn continually improve the perception of his environment. The 'Act of Creation' is the purpose of Life and dictated by The Cosmic Mind. It is thus man's own willingness to grasp this, and if he does not his own creations will just reflect his inability to create out of Empathy and he will rather be tempted to use creativity to strengthen control structures, resulting in more Fear of Being. That very dual dynamics is which sustaining any monolithic ideology.

The Act of Creation is the most daunting motion as it also constantly demands to let go the old, stretches and collapses paradigms, while ever widening the meaning of Reality. The problem is that education teaches the exact opposite by imposing norms. Any new element invading the daily routine is met with such a challenge that most prefer to rely on (whatever) organizations thinking for them. Such a stance is the result of an induced linear thinking, a mental construct, agreeing that control structures are needed regardless of social and technological evolution because we cannot get rid of man's primitive traits. That if cavemen had to hunt, we are condemned to chase money just like them and must accept that some are better at it, and therefore deserve to rule and print our currencies. In a nutshell, such a Consensus regards boom and bust economic cycles as a fatality of life, just as war. Only a non dualistic approach will conclude, and if taking a closer look at all those financial crises dotting human history, that there is another interpretation at stake and which is that those cycles were mere repetitive warnings calling up our senses to quit harming ourselves and the emergency to fix such a detrimental pattern. From this conclusion also springs another one, that either monetary science is a fallacy that needs to be abandoned or just meant to be deceptive.

Unfortunately it is too late to replace 'money printed out of thin air' with currencies backed by intrinsic values such as gold and silver. Our economic paradigm began to inexorably contract with the Information Age, the invention of the computer. What seems to have worked out for millennia, isn't really as it seems as the model has also greatly improved the 'art of killing' on a massive scale. The Emphatic Society section expounds on this more deeply. When the Act of Creation serves the 'art of killing' and 'monetary speculation', there is only one aftermath possible as the dynamics is exponential, and which can only translate into devastating shocks to the system.

As we can see today, The Information Age is ever increasing the speed of communication and shaping the Mind Matrix, the Collective, making it blatant that nothing is like it seems. As a matter of fact, Reality has always been about what we want to make of it as it depends on the information readily available and which one perceives to be accurate. However, the Information Age has also allowed man's creativity to surpass itself, it is the main drive propelling technology, and by technology it is meant Robotics essentially. Robotics is a trend that many still regard as science fiction or associate with awesome gadgets. This perception shifts somehow their lack of concern about what is merely ten to fifteen years ahead and will impose upon societies unprecedented shock waves. The only way to avoid the latter is to declare the Information Age as anti-humanitarian but how realistic is it? Can we block the advance of Knowledge itself when societies already rely so much on computerization? Achieving this would send us back to a late 1800's lifestyle, prior the Industrial Revolution. These are the choices that we are faced with... either way, both options would bring about a paradigm collapse caused by the Act of Creation, which is thus metaphysical in essence. Failing to comprehend the purpose of the Act Of Creation brings about The Act of Destruction. The nature of the Act of Creation is benevolent and there cannot be any benevolence in any profit driven system. The widespread mindset of chasing money is at the core of world afflictions and upheavals.

The advance of Robotics will affect everybody, from the factory worker to the surgeon as machines will eventually become smart enough to take over their tasks. With the rise of Artificial Intelligence, computers will self-build, and this means that even software programmers, engineers and decision makers will not have a job anymore. The media industry is already close to become entirely digitalized and at some point, virtual characters will replace today actors and TV anchors. Considering this very near future environment, what is exactly the future of money? Hard money, currency backed by gold and silver, won't be of any help either since jobs cannot be created. Considering that such an important matter is not debated by the media daily, most are not prepared for what can be summarized as the end of society as we know it. One can discuss at length AI and the threat it may represent, but one thing is more than certain is that AI will be at the image of those who created it (and whose need for mass control is unlimited) and the Collective's reaction to a chaotic change of perceptions. Regardless of whether societies decide to outlaw the progression of Knowledge and impose upon themselves to return of a 1800s lifestyle or embrace the consequences of navigating uncharted territories, there is no way around it: a crisis in Consciousness awaits mankind. This crisis isn't new at all, it has always existed deep within our fragmented self but so far had remained completely silent, insidious, and now on the brink on an inevitable 'inner revolution'.

What led to this impasse, isn't the evolution of Knowledge per se but rather the value attributed to money, its chase since its inception, the ensuing institutionalization of 'usury' and borrowing the future as if there are no tomorrows. The world economy is so leveraged that any attempt to slow down spending habits, either by an interest rate increase, self restraint or the implementation of hard currencies, will cause a global economic crash. Social Darwinism is the drive of the run up for profit and forced consumerism that keep the system afloat, which sustain and cause scarcity and in turn impose subjective values. Indeed what is the value of just anything we can think of when the global debt is so many times higher than its GDP? What to think of economic prosperity when some countries enjoy a bigger credit line than others and determine the level of economic manipulation as a result? For millennia long man has tried to patch a feeling of aloneness by making sense of elusive materialistic pursuits. The right to ownership and privatization of natural resources are too about to become a fiction clearly establishing that nobody owns Earth. Instead, She owns us and gives us everything free of charge and therefore is a model we ought to follow with dedication. It is the failure of observing Her own Natural Law that causes environmental destruction. It is the rampant persistence to accumulate wealth or struggle to keep the little we own that deters from acknowledging the set of Cosmic Principles governing Free Will and that there is no Free Will without empathy.

As demonstrated above, the dilemma is definitely esoteric in the sense that The Act of Creation mirrors that the purpose of materialism is to allow the Cosmic Mind to reveal Itself. Our Physical Reality does exist to interpret and manifest the Cosmic Mind mirroring Itself back to us. For Enlightenment to take over, we need to grasp the implications of failing or ignoring that The Act Of Creation is dictated by the Cosmic Mind. Any financial model based on profit and speculation will always seeks ways to lower the costs of production, and therefore is immoral because the Consensus wants the Collective to believe that hard work is always rewarded. Ending this erroneous perception implies the end of money as we know it. Life itself comes to a zero sum game which can no longer be passed onto the next generations. The market exists as an illusion, or delusion, that society can cheat this very zero sum game. More Knowledge does not lead to more wealth but less materialism. With the responsibility of knowing comes which of understanding the very dual nature of Life and that a money free society governed by the Act of Creation is the only path possible to explore and achieve world peace and more importantly, Infinite Awareness. ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Celine Kayser. is an atypical and autodidact thinker whose background is quite eclectic. Philosophy has always been a major field of interest of hers, especially that of Jiddu Krishnamurti and Walter Russell in the more recent years and which radically influence her writings. She also attentively follows the amazing developments in Epigenetic Research - led by Bruce Lipton – and paving the way for the merging of spirituality and sciences. With Sacred Geometry and Vedic Math, she began to observe the Universe with a new 'Hermetic' understanding. Celine also investigated Ancient Knowledge for many years to unroot the esoteric origins of 'good and evil'. She is a voluntarist at heart and this means that she aims at promoting social structures espousing non-aggression Principles. Celine's main focus is to share her insights and which can be summarized as 'cosmogenic guidelines' to enhance humans' awareness.
